Description: The Liberator Class Cruiser is a small capital ship which serves as a major starfighter transport platform for the Rebellion and New Republic. Capable of carrying 6 full squadrons and their support staff, and three full regiments of troops, the Liberator is a powerful and effective platform for launching assaults. However it is a weakly armed vessel, and although it can match any non-military vessel for speed and combat effectiveness, it is a poor match for Imperial Military vessels, requiring a number of defence craft to perform in fleet engagements. The Liberator Class was provided to the Rebellion by SoroSuub towards the end of the reign of Emperor Palpatine, and became one of the first custom built Rebel Starships, serving with distinction alongside the retrofitted Mon Calimari Cruisers and stolen Nebulon-B frigates, becoming a major boost to Rebel legitimacy as a power capable of challenging the Empire. Liberators continue to serve the New Republic and look set to last for a long time yet, even though new vessels of this class are no longer manufactured.
