Description: The Restitution Class Courier is a light transport vessel designed for carry small quantities of valuable cargo or data across the galaxy and has been in service for many decades with little alteration to the design. Although once fast both in hyperspace and in normal space the Restitution is now showing its age and no longer seems quite as impressive as it once did, this however has had no effect on its sales which remain as high as they always have. However the fighterlike qualities of this vessel has made it somewhat popular with bounty hunters and mercenaries, the upper loading hatch being easily converted into a bay for missiles or other weapon systems as well as the small cargo hold being easily converted in cells and living accomodation for the pilot. Although the vessel is equipped with 3 months of consumables, anyone attempting to last this amount of time is in for an uncomfortable time of it, since the small 2 person cockpit and the equally small bunk, autochef and fresher is enough for a person to survive in but offers no luxury or comfort at all. Restitutions served with the Rebel Alliance in its early days, allowing cells to communicate without relying on open communications systems which could be monitored or intercepted by the Empire.
