Equipment D20 / The Heavy Repeating T

The Heavy Repeating Tactical Harness (HRTH)
OR HerTech

Description:
The tactical harness is a complex piece of technology designed for precise, heavy hits in ground warfare. The HRTH uses two Heavy Repeating Blasters connected for dual fire, or the user may que different targets and the HTRH will cycle through the qued targets indepently. The targeting computer is linked to the users retinal motions for target identification, via a monocular bracket which lowers to the users eye level when in use. When the targeting computer is not being used it stores in an upright position and the weapons may not be fired. The triggers are linked from the pack assembly to gloves, the triggers are hair-sensitive pads in the fingers of the gloves. When the cannons are in use they are fastened in a horizontal position at the users waist level, when not in use they swing around to the users back, into a vertical position.

History:
It was developed by a former SpecForce Heavy Weapons Specialist Carouse Al-Vanick, nicknamed CAV, who after he retired became an engineer.
