

Krail 311 Bounty Hunter Armor

After norval Garaint made Krail 210 armor famous, bounty hunters everywhere wanted to get their hands on it. However Krail

210 was expensive so they made a scaled back model and increased the cpaabilities of the things they kept. The Krail 311 has an internal sensor pod which can be used to track quarry as well as hooked up to a homing beacon or tracking device.

An intregal line slinger is built into the wrist and can use either grappling or magnetic hooks. The line slinger is attached to a winch with enough strength to pull most wearers and their equipment up. The final touch is the Bounty

Scouter. Right at the temple on the helmet is a camouflaged button, pressing it while lookibng at someone scans their face and body contours while connecting to a local holonet channel and running a serach for a bounty on the person at high speed. This is of course not useful if there's no holonet access on the planet the wearer is on, but the rest of the time it rarely fails to find a bounty on the person if they ahve one.
