The King Hamon class was designed on the orders of Prince General Bastian and named after his brother the king, unfortunately the king was assassinated before the first five were fully operational and they were only able to join the war against his killers half way through, however once they had they proved to be everything that was promised.

It continues to serve as the Kingdoms largest warship design, capable of launching over a thousand fighters, hundreds of bombers and landing tens of thousands of troops, its improved super ion cannon is a devastating advantage against even against larger warships and certain doom against stationary ones.
