Special Abilities:

Anzati Tracking: Anzati are able to sense the Force in others, and each is automatically considered Force-sensitive and possessing of the Sense Force skill. When tracking prey, Anzati often times use Force powers such as Life Detection, Life Sense, Receptive Telepathy, Sense Force, and Sense Force Potential. They receive a bonus to their Sense skill equal to the number of Force Points of their prey.

Anzati Hypnosis: The Anzati use a crude, but affective form of telepathy to hypnotize their prey. The Anzat may attempt to hypnotize a sentient being within five meters. The Anzat rolls their Sense and the target makes Willpower check (Difficulty = Easy + the Anzati's Sense roll). This difficulty increases to Moderate within two meters or less. If the target fails they are stunned and lose their actions for the round. If an Anzati is attacked, interrupted, or otherwise distracted before he can insert his proboscises into his victim, the hypnosis effect ends immediately and the victim can act normally.

Long-lived: Anzati are practically immortal, and can live for eons.

Stealthy: Because they must secretly hunt sentient beings, Anzati have grown adept at maintaining their stealth and secrecy. This is reflected in a +1D bonus to their hide and sneak skills.

Vampires: The Anzati feed from living beings. For every turn spent feeding, 2 pips are subtracted from the victim's Knowledge, Mechanical, Perception, and Technical attributes. If any one attribute is reduced to 0D or less, the victim dies. The damage to the attributes is permanent, and reduces skills accordingly.

Anhedonia: A common misconception among those who studied tales of the Anzati was that they were hyper-developed scholars, experts in fields of knowledge and craft long since forgotten by younger species. While Anzati could remember things that happened centuries earlier, they had little or no interest in pursuing mastery of any given area of expertise or knowledge. In play whenever an Anzati character attempts to increase a skill they must test that skill against a difficulty equal to 3 times it's Dice code. So an Anzati attempting to increase a skill from 3D+2 to 4D, must roll 3D+2 against a target of 9, or 5D+1 to 5D+2 rolls 5D+1 against a target of 15. If the skill roll succeeds, then the experience is spent, but the skill isn't increased as the Anzati lost interest in the subject without learning anything.

Biography

The last hunt

Sint Yoru, a male Anzat assassin, was the husband of Nakia Yoru. Sint, Nakia, and the Blood Carver Ku Vrat were tasked by Lun Rask of the Black Sun to kill both Cade Skywalker and Gunn Yage at the behest of Nieve Gromia, the Imperial Moff of the Arkanis sector. Nakia and Sint tracked Skywalker and Yage to Mos Eisley on Tatooine, and then followed their targets into the Dune Sea. The bounty hunters found their targets in a speeder in the Jundland Wastes. They proceeded to fire on Skywalker and Yage, but the pair managed to escape into the desert under approaching sandstorm. When Sint asked Nakia about purposely missing her shots, she responded that she needed to consume Skywalker's soup. Sint agreed to take Yage's and leave Skywalker to her.

Later, Sint and Nakia went to the wreckage of their prey's speeder and a fight broke out between Sint and Ku Vrat over who had lost the targets. After the fight came to a draw, the three bounty hunters waited out the sandstorm in a ship. When they emerged to track Skywalker and Yage again, the Anzati had found their prey asleep at the abandoned Lars homestead. Sint used the opportunity to take Cade's lightsaber, then prepared to consume Yage's soup while Nakia was about to consume Skywalker's. However, Skywalker awakened prematurely and kicked her before using the Force to throw her off of him. Sint tried to psychically assault Skywalker but the two men ended up grappling with each other. Sint recovered and brandished a lightsaber that was obtained by hunting and killing a Jedi. The Anzati grazed Skywalker's armor with it, but Skywalker used summoned his own lightsaber back and killed Sint with one strike, as Sint was no match for his skill with lightsaber combat.
