LS-2 Plastique Explosive

Plastique is a generic term given to older putty-like explosives usually formed in blocks. These explosives can be quite powerful, though not as powerful as some modern weapons. The plastique is wadded together with electronic detonators stuck into the wad and set either for remote detonation or else with a timer placed on. The "boom stick" is slightly different as the pastique is actually ground up ingrediants mixed with liquid components in a short narrow tube. An old fashioned fuse is attached and is lit to activate.
