No one is quite sure of how the Mecino came into being. They've been around as long as people can remember. They aren't considered droids, even though they're made of metal, since they're 'alive' and need no programming. Unlike other organic sentients, it is possible to program them using Droid Programming, although the droid in question may resist all attempts with Willpower and a +10 bonus. A beginning Mecino may not be force sensitive, although special circumstances may make one so later.
