Cabrin Tivaterex

Cabrin Tivaterex was what many would call the galaxy's master vampire. It was Cabrin who created the legendary Kaplan Ddar-Montis and a handful of other vampires during the earliest days of galactic civilization.

No one, not even Cabrin, is sure of his age. However, a good estimate might place him at being anywhere from thirty to forty thousand years old, possibly dating back before the implementation of hyperdrives.

Cabrin's thirst for blood never corrupted him as much as it did with Kaplan. He would feed selectively, quietly and do his best to avoid overdoing things. For this reason, Cabrin never came into the spotlight of myth and legend and was never hunted by the Jedi like Kaplan.

Even though his ways differed from that of Kaplan, he still carried respect for Kaplan as a brother since they were the only two vampires left alive after the Jedi Purge. Cabrin had debated creating new vampires, something which he hadn't done in several thousand years, but decided to wait until a better time to do so.

Special Abilities:

- Claws and fangs: STR+1D damage

 - Immortality: Some vampires have a special connection to the force that feeds him life force in times of need. Vampires may be killed through normal means but will awaken in 1D rounds with all wounds healed. Any injuries will heal one injury level every 1D rounds.

Example: Cabrin is wounded by a pair of blaster shots to the chest. A roll of 1D is made three times (one for each injury level) resulting in a 2, 4 and 3. Cabrin will move up to wounded after 2 rounds, stunned after 4 rounds and will be completely healed after 3 rounds.

- Force sense: Vampires can naturally sense when another is nearby (usually within 20 meters). Jedi Knights and immortals often give off this same signal, giving away their presence as well.

- Night vision: Vampires, being nocturnal, have evolved improved vision and thus receive a +2D bonus to Perception checks and all sight-related skills in the dark.

* - Vampire creation: An ability unique to Cabrin, it allows him to turn others into vampires. A mortal being turned into a vampire may or may not gain immortality from it (see below table). Cabrin must simply mortally wound a character and force the character to feed on his blood. Cabrin's blood will cause 4D damage to a character once taken in. After death occurs, roll 1D on the following table:

- | | | |
|--------|---|---|
| 1 or 2 | - | For whatever reason the character dies and the transformation does not take effect. |
| 3 | - | The character has come back to life fully healed as a mortal but does not turn to a vampire. |
| 4 | - | The character has come back to life fully healed, the transformation of a vampire has taken hold and the character will develop all vampire abilities in 1D days. |
| 5 | - | The transformation has taken an immediate effect, all vampire abilities are fully developed. |
| 6 | - | The transformation takes effect and not only do the vampire abilities form but the character has become immortal. |

Story Factors:

- Intolerance to sunlight: Vampires are extremely intolerant of exposure to sunlight. Prolonged exposure to direct sunlight inflicts 1D of damage on a Vampire every hour which increases by +1D for every additional hour of exposure. Example: A Vampire is in direct sunlight for 3 hours and suffers 1D damage for the first hour, 2D damage for the second hour and 3D damage for the third hour.
- Blood thirst: Vampires feed on the blood of sapient species and are often times irresistably drawn to blood by either sight or smell.

Move: 11 (walking), 16 (flying)
