Description: The All Terrain Command Post is a small control and command vehicle designed to coordinate Imperial forces on a small scale, reusing the design and same stock of parts as the All Terrain Scout Transport, an economical and efficient practice. These vehicles were intended to replace Chariot Command Speeders in controlling battalions and small armoured columns, but after the Battle of Endor these plans were pretty much abandoned due to the need for the frames for these vehicles to be used for AT-ST's instead. A few AT-CP's remain in operation, and their advanced communication systems which can communicate across interstellar distances if necessary, and a sensor package which allows the commander aboard to scan a large area to detect enemy activities and plan friendly military action over an entire battle area.
