Description: The M-38 Explorer was a product of the exploration boom of the Old Republic, with thousands of people tracking out into the unknown attempting to discover new planets and lifeforms, the dangers were huge, as were the losses in life and equipment. The M-38 is designed to help deal with the dangers on unexplored planets, with heavy armour able to resist hostile animal attacks or lightning strikes with equal efficiency, and extremely advanced sensor systems, the M-38 could deal with most situations and survive. The M-38's brain is equally advanced, being designed so that the droid can help out aboard ship as well as out on its own on a planetary surface. These droids have now been phased out as the newer Arakyd Probe Droids are faster and cheaper, although the M-38 may be archaic in some ways, its sensor and logic systems are still far more advanced than those used in the Arakyd droids, making this older droid still popular with those that prefer the quality of this droid over the speed of the Viper Probe Droids.
