Arbitron: Electric Pulse Weapon

The EP-W is a seemingly normal metal rod until you meet the electric field that is emitted from the tip for a brief moment. The end of the staff is pointed away from the user and a pulse of intense electricity blasts from the end in a forward cone that can take down almost anything. An unobtrusive wire runs from the staff to a backpack containing a battery that powers it. Though originally advertised as a self defense tool, the EP-W was quickly picked up by thieves and thugs for their less reputable business.
