

Raszul

The Raszul are a humanoid race from outside the galaxy proper. They have skin that is dark grey in colour and shock white hair, and all black eyes like those of an animal. Aside from these characteristics they look basically human. What are now considered the Raszul are actually outcasts from the rest of the race. They had secretly initiated a breeding plan within their society, of the healthiest members and the most long lived. This went on for several centuries until it was discovered. By then inbreeding had been achieved with weeding out of defective strains, closing off this sect. They were totally independent of the rest of the race, because they were hardier, lived longer, and did not have to nor would they breed with the rest of their race. This resulted in mob violence and persecution of them. An elaborate plan was formed and the hundred thousand Raszul stole a gigantic spaceship in orbit of their planet, that had just finished construction. The ship was meant to find new planets and colonize them, and easily fit all hundred thousand Raszul. They managed a daring escape in the craft with the use of its top of the line drive systems. In the height of irony, the homeworld of Jeka XI was attacked by the Ssi-Ruuk three days later leaving the Raszul onboard the Frontier Horizons as the only survivors of the race. They wander around the galaxy on the giant spaceship, looking for a world identical to their homeworld, so they might start over.
