Description: The AT-AT Dropship is an upgrade of the older AT-AT Barge, and although it is barely larger than the Barge, it has a number of improvements over the older design. The Dropship is a starship in its own right, capable of carrying a single AT-AT walker through hyperspace to a distant target. With hyperdrive capability and fatser engines the Dropship is a fairly decent starship, and coupled with the already tough armour it has inherited from the Barge, the Dropship can be improved into a good combat vessel. However the Empire has only limited numbers of these ships, and they are used during important assaults only, operating in conjunction with Star Destroyers deploying AT-AT Barges to bolster a ground attack. Dropships are extremely rare outside of Imperial control, and it is totally illegal for civilians to own one within Imperial controlled space.
