Bharic

The Bharic are an advanced species which have been part of the galactic community for several thousand years, although their predeliction for violence never made them popular. Their nimbleness and dexterity make them naturals with almost any kind of equipment, and while not overly good with technology they make excellent pilots and gunners which gave them a certain popularity in the fringe.

When the Empire replaced the Republic as the galactic government the Bharic found their talents in demand, and like the Trandoshans, the Bharic were sponsored in an invasion of a nearby world so that the Empire could take the population as slaves. Also like the Trandoshans, the Bharic have a reputation for being untrustworthy and cruel, this combined with their alliance with the Empire means that they are disliked by most other species.
