Characters D6 / Imperial Clone Warriors

Clone Warrior

The Clone Warriors are a new creation of the Clone Lord Atha Prime, designed from the original template of the Clone Troopers which fought for the Old Republic. The Clone Warriors are genetically superior individuals, with enhanced strength and dexterity achieved through more massive muscle structures and stronger more reactive tendons and nervous systems. Onto this enhance body, the brain is implanted with training and skills, as well as ingrained obediance and loyalty. This means that the bodies can be grown in a matter of months, and as they mature memories can be loaded into them so after only six months they can emerge ready for action. Although the implanted memories and training means that Clone Warriors can be easy to predict and tactically out-manuever, the massive numbers they can be quickly and easily prepared in means that this disadvantage is not overwhelming and still leaves the Clone Warriors as a viable and well trained fighting force. Obedient and loyal to Atha Prime, the Clone Warriors follow his commands, and the commands of his few Imperial officers, relying on their commanders for tactical planning, and motivation. Without which Clone Warriors will simply continue to follow their last orders until they are no longer capable of following them.
