Description: The H type transport was a popular personal vessel with the rich during the final days of the Old Republic, with luxurious accomodations and plenty of room for luggage and equipment, the A type was popular until replaced by the armed transports of the Imperial era. These vessels were popular among republic senators and royal families, but were heavily over-priced, forcing the model out of production when competition became heavier. Most still available for sale are still in pristine condition, but some have been equipped to deal with the more dangerous galaxy that followed the years when the ships were built, but on the whole the original owners were so rich that they could afford fighter squadrons to protect them.
