Description: The Outreach is a common speeder truck, used for carrying small amounts of cargo too small to require a full cargo skiff. The cockpit offers a good field of vision, and is enclosed to protect the driver from the weather, and the cargo area although open to the environment is large, and can carry a few passengers instead of cargo. However complaints have been made that the suspension field is a little soft, and the speeder often feels out of control because of this. And although this protects the cargo from damage during a rough ride, and lends itself to a comfortable ride, most owners harden this somewhat to give the speeder a crisper control. The Outreach is common on farms and plantations on backwater worlds where mass transportation is less common.
