Description: As the New Republic expanded its influence across the galaxy the need for a large and powerful walker became necessary to match the Empire's AT-AT Walkers. Although the New Republic was using captured AT-AT's and fast airspeeders to defeat the Empire, they needed to project an image of power and yet show that they were different to the Empire. The Titan was designed by a consortium of different core world corporations, and has thicker armour, more powerful weapons and a higher top speed than the AT-AT, although costs considerably more. The high cost has meant that the Republic hasn't ordered large enough number of these walkers for them to make a major impact on the galactic civil war, but they are trooped out at ceremonies to show the military might of the Republic when necessary.
