Description: The JV-Z1/D series of droid was built by Serv-O-Droid during the butler droid fad many centuries ago, and although the droid sold well, they have faded away with the years until only a very few of them remain. Butler droids are patient and subserviant, with genteel sounding voices and a database packed with details of customs and manners from across the galaxy, from exactly how to serve fruit from Kashyyk, to how to fold the Sulistan Ambassadors cloak, therefore managing to make 3-P0 droids look relaxed in comparision. Most owners like the idea of a Butler droid, but soon become bored with the minutiae that troubles it, and its lack of real skills, therefore putting the droids back on the market quickly and accounting for their extremely low price. The Droids were orignally covered with a veneer of polished silver chromite, but the years have rusted this away to scattered patches on most of the remaining JV-Z1/D's, leaving them looking shabby and barely functional.
