Description: When Atha Prime siezed control of the Galaxies Edge Installation, he wanted a capital ship capable of carrying him and his army safely across the galaxy. Although he knew of the plans for Super Star Destroyers, he saw these as too extravagant, and so set out to design a vessel for himself. The Annihilator Class Star Destroyer was the result, a dual hulled Star Destroyer design, capable of hauling massive amounts of troops, fighters and firepower. Although not a great improvement of the standard Star Destroyer, Atha Prime is happy with his design, and it has served him well so far. The first vessel of this design was the Annihilator itself, Atha Primes personal Star Destroyer which has a slight modification to the later designs. The Annihilator has docking latches on the tower structure, so the Atha Primes personal vessel, the Apex Invader, can dock and become part of the control structure of his command ship.
