

Raycid

The Raycid are a highly evolved saurian species, with powerful reptilian bodies and a society dating back several thousand years. The Raycid homeworld is tropical paradise where the Raycid are easily top of the foodchain with both their intelligence and powerful bodies giving them an easy life. This has led to little need for the Raycid to develop technology beyond the basics, so while their society has existed for many thousands of years it still only reached a medieval level of technology.

Upon being introduced to the galactic community the Raycid took to the stars with a strong need to explore and experience new things. The Raycid however found that their females required a very particular mixture of minerals to lay eggs, a combination found only on their homeworld, meaning that all Raycid must return home to breed which allows all young Raycid to grow up surrounded by their natural homeworld and their true culture.
