Description: The Geonosian Sonik Energy Cannon emits sound waves which can be incredibly damaging to any target that it hits, the spread of these sonic waves is quite large which accounts for the fairly short range of this large weapon, but does allow targets to be easily hit (+2D to skill). However this also counts as a disadvantage to the weapon, as the weapon hits an area, so cannot easily distinguish between targets (-2D to skill if target is in close (2m) to another target, or both are hit). This does make the weapon excellent for suppressing areas of enemy troops. The Sonik Energy Cannon was originally designed for the Geonosians to use themselves, but it was sometimes used by most of the Confederation forces during the Clone Wars, so once they were defeated became widely available on the black market. Its regenerative power source, and high level of damage has made it a moderate success, with a few pirated designs still being produced even though the Empire introduced tough laws to stop the production of Geonosian weaponry.
