Story Factors:

Traditional: Klatooinian civilization was notable for its strong belief in tradition and the wisdom of elders. The center of their culture was the Fountain of Ancients, a slowly evolving natural glass sculpture on Klatooine's Derelkoos Desert. Long before the formation of the Galactic Republic, primitive Klatooinians discovered the Fountain, and revered it as a symbol of patience, tenacity, and the idea of strength coming from age. Their society was ruled by a Council of Elders, who granted young Klatooinians few rights. Klatooinians were taught the myths and traditions of their people from a young age, in a process which tended to suppress individuality. At the age of ten, they would be sold into servitude, with the most rebellious youths sent into the harshest conditions.

Description: Koob was a member of the Stinger Mantis crew and friend of Cal Kestis, who he met on Norsid. After a Haxion Brood bounty hunter had gotten the drop on the Jedi, he and his twin sister, Lizz, saved him by throwing the hunter down a mine shaft, subsequently becoming close friends with Kestis.
Koob was known amongst the crew for having a voracious appetite, with Gabs speculating that he ate their prey during a mission on Carida.

He was sent on a mission to Coruscant by Saw Gerrera to steal intelligence from Senator Daho Sejan alongside Kestis, Lizz, Gabs, Bravo, and newcomer Bode Akuna by disguising themselves as Coruscant Security Forces, bringing in Kestis to the senator. The plan succeeded, but during the extraction, the Ninth Sister ambushed them and killed the senator. Koob and Lizz attempted to fight her, only to end up killed. Cal sadly reminisced theirs and Gabs death moments later, then mourned them—and the recently deceased Bravo—properly once safely in hyperspace.

While vicious and very powerful in battle, Koob and his sister were actually very affectionate and protective of their friends. Koob was seen happily clapping Cal's back (and ruffling his hairs) on their reunion on Coruscant while Lizz hugged the Jedi. Both twins also launched themselves to the Ninth Sister in a doomed action of fighting her in a a hand to hand battle to protect their friends without any hesitation.

The twins only spoke Huttese, but perfectly understood basic.
