Creatures D6 / Relter (Flying Bat-like predato

Name: Relter
Designation: Non-sentient
Feather color: Grey, brown
Eye color: Orange
Distinctions: Wings, Ear feathers
Point of origin: Koboh
Diet: Carnivore

Dexterity: 2D
Perception: 2D
Strength: 3D

Special Abilities

Flying: Relter are flying predators, but can be tamed to carry a rider for short distances. For each round they are carrying a humanoid sized target, they must make a stamina roll against a target number of the number of rounds they have been carrying the target as they lose height until they drop the target on the ground.

Thermal Vents: Relter can use Thermal Vents to ascend to great heights, which allow them to search for prey.

Attacks: Relter are capable of clawing and biting at targets, doing Str+1D in damage when they do so.

Move: 5 (Walk), 25 (Fly)
Orneriness: 2D

Description: Relters were a species of winged creature that resided on the Outer Rim planet Koboh.

Biology and appearance

Relters were winged carnivores that had gray-and-brown skin. Their eyes were orange and their ears ended in tufted feathers. Relters laid eggs and typically did not leave their eggs unguarded for long.

History

Relters were tamed by Jedi Knight Cal Kestis in 9 BBY. They could carry him whilst flying in the air.

By 9 BBY, damage to the Koboh ecosystem caused by the Bedlam Raiders forced relters to fly further and longer in search of food.[2]

Stats by FreddyB, Descriptive Text from WookieePedia.
Image copyright LucasArts.

Any complaints, writs for copyright abuse, etc should be addressed to the Webmaster FreddyB.