Vetricon BV-9 Sharpshooter's Rifle

The BV-9 was one of vetricon's first attempts at developing a Blaster. It was made especialy for Hammer's Slammers' sharpshooters. It has a lean black modular casing around the barrel and solid plastoid stock. Thoguh it is slow to cycle through it's recharge, the BV-9 has an excellent punch to it, and can get an almsot hpenomenal range on it's shots. A comapct thermal iamging scope is mount on the top of the rifle and runs off an advanced battery which msut be replaced every three days of use.
