Races D6 / Neti

Neti

Neti are a species known for their longevity, members of which have been known to survive for millennia.

The ancient planet Ryyk was the homeworld of the Neti race, which was also known as the Ryyk. The planet Ryyk was destroyed shortly before the onset of the Great Sith War, more than 4,000 before the Battle of Endor..

Special Abilities:
Metamorph: A Neti has the innate ability to alter its shape and size at will. A Neti can vary its size anywhere from Character-scale to Speeder to Walker, for every size larger than Character-scale the Neti may add 1 to his Move. A Neti can also alter its form to be roughly humanoid, squat and quadrupedal, or solid and treelike. Changing size and shape is a full-round action. (Refer to the Star Wars Roleplaying Game rulebook for details on scale modifiers.) Even in quadrupedal or treelike form, a Neti has manipulative tendrils to operate tools and make attacks. A Neti in quadrupedal form is one level of difficult harder to trip or move. A Neti in its stationary tree form is extremely resistant to these attacks (+4D stability bonus on all rolls to oppose trips and throws), but it is immobile.

Photosynthesis: As plants, Neti have no need for food. They have a greatly reduced need for water, as long as they have regular access to broad-spectrum light. A Neti needs only one-tenth the water of most races, but if deprived of sunlight, it starves, much as other races do when lacking food. A Neti with the Force skill Control that enters a hibernation trance can survive almost indefinitely in an area with natural sunlight and rain.

Camouflage: In its treelike form, a Neti gains a +3D circumstance bonus on Hide checks when concealed among trees and similar foliage.

All Neti are Force-sensitive.
