Belecuu AR33 "Vindicator"

On the modern battlefield firearms are typically considered obsolete due to their overall ineffectiveness against modern armor. Even so, they still do have their advantages over blasters. The main advantage is the higher rate of fire that many slugthrowers can achieve as well as an extended range as projectiles tend not to dissipate over distance like energy bolts.

The Belecuu AR33-A2 "Vindicator" assault rifle is typical of many modern day military slugthrower rifles in that it packs an extremely hard punch, high rate of fire and a range equivalent to the standard light repeating blaster. The AR33-A2 can easily be equipped with one of several scopes ranging from a simple hunter's scope to a military sighting macroscope as well as a large silencer making it suitable for sniper work. It may also be outfitted with several under-barrel attachments including micro-grenade launchers, grenade launchers, heavy slug launchers or even a heavy blaster attachment. The AR33 was originally designed to be modular in nature to allow it to fit into almost any type of mission profile. The AR33-A3 model even features a new removable stock for close quarters combat.
