Railgun Pistol

The PRG incorporates new technology into the firearm market. The PRG fires razor tipped armor piercing rounds via magnetic propulsion that effectively throws the round several times the speed of sound leaving the target long dead before he the sound of the round cutting through the air reaches his corpse. The actual firing of the weapon is nearly silent as there is no internal explosion propelling the rounds as in other firearms so the only sounds are a high pitched whistling as the round cuts through the air and a sonic boom of the round going super-sonic.

The Type IV PRG is the smallest railgun known to be ever produced. It is about the size of a standard blaster pistol and is much more deadly than even the famed BlasTech DL-44 heavy blaster pistol. The Type IV houses a long ammunition clip in the handle as well as a standard pistol power pack to power the weapon's electro-magnets.

Railgun pistols are standard issue to the Palvar Defense Force's spacetroopers as they function better than standard blasters in the vacuum of space.
