Equipment D20 / Long Distance Communicat

Long Distance Comlink Upgrade

This upgrade allows communication from distant planets. It attaches to most sized and varieties of comlinks, and some communication has been known to be reached from the Core Worlds to the Outer Rim! The technology has been slaved over by the Empire to maintain communication between the heavily Imperial planets and the distant planets where the Empire has little control.

The first "Long Distance Communication Upgrade" wasn't used until after a month after the Battle of Endor when Rebel forces knocked out a key Imperial Communication Center located in the Outer Rim. This forced the Empire to be creative, so they decided to use this. Communication is still being held this way, and will until the Empire rebuilds the Communication Center. Rebel forces have yet to grab this technology.

GAME NOTE: Gamemasters should only allow Imperial players to use this technology, unless stolen by Rebel or other characters. Also be sure to note that since this is only a minor upgrade, the strength and clarity of the communication link will get more worse the longer the distance.
