Planets D6 / Spathiwa

Spathiwa

Spathiwa is covered in wetlands in which the native inhabitants, the Spathi, thrive in. The native Spathi went from using primitive tools to space travel in under a hundred standard years as they were being terrorized by evil and foul creatures that suddenly appeared out of no where one day. Once acheiving space travel, the Spathi fled from Spathiwa to their only moon where they lived for nearly three hundred standard years afraid to set foot on their homeworld of Spathiwa. A passing battle cruiser rained down death unto Spathiwa killing the evil creatures for mere fun. Once the battle cruiser was long gone... by ten or so local years... the Spathi returned to Spathiwa and repopulated their homeworld. Today it is a thriving planet full of life (mainly Spathi and a few of the evil creatures which resemble rabbits). There are dozens of massive cities and starports on each continent. Even with their advanced space technology, the Spathi rarely leave their own planet because they do not feel safe enough to wander away and explore other sectors. Spathi customs is extremely strict, making Imperial customs seem enjoyable. The Spathi are overly paranoid about something getting onto their planet that may force them to flee to their moon once again.
