

Rokurgan

Rokurgan is a very odd world where high technology meets ancient culture. The world is a fairly hot and moist world with a rich heritage. The planet has two inhabitants, Humans, and Agana. The humans are divided into large clans, and families within their clans. An emperor rules over all the clans as well as being the head of his own clan. For many years the Lion Clan held the throne, but their monopoly was broken through political maneuverings. The Imperial Court of Rokurgan is filled with intrigue, assassinations, spying and so forth. Rokurgan is a world where ancient samurai still live, and follow their strict codes of honour. The clans often squabble or even full out war with one another, as well as the humans constantly being at conflict with the serpentine Agana. Rokurgan had a conflict with its neighboring systems during the time of the Old Republic, and Jedi were sent to negotiate. After that, Rokurgan was left largely alone, with only minor and strictly regulated traffic coming in and out of the planet. Rokurgan has sparse high technology while maintaining its cultural identity even down to its architecture, with slight modifications. One of the most well-known families of Rokurgan is the Iuchi family in the Unicorn clan. They are believed to have Jedi blood running through them. Their style of martial arts is considered superior to any other on planet, and they are also well known for a mastery of weapon forging techniques. Iuchiban blades are very strong and well crafted weapons. There are four Iuchiban swords from ancient times that legend says hold great power. These were lost during a time of great chaos though. Very few outsiders are ever left on Rokurgan and even fewer natives of Rokurgan ever leave aside from those who pilot starships to trading posts out in the galaxy.
