Planets D6 / Fukaseshi

Fukaseshi

Fukaseshi is mostly known as a corporate factory site, but a select few also know that it is home to a pirate base. The small corporation that is using the planet knows about these pirates and pays them a small 'protection fee' to keep them from attacking them.

Most of the planet is covered in thick jungle, with small clearings every so often. The ground is soft and unstable, so all structures built on the surface are set in the air by durasteel 'stilts' that are planted in the ground. Although there is no visible surface water on the planet, many areas of the planet are simply water with thick weeds, meaning that anything that tries to move over them sinks, with the obvious exception of repulsor and hover vehicles.
