Races D6 / Shofixti

Shofixti

The Shofixti possess a quality noticeably lacking in much of the galaxy in recent years: bravery. This primitive species of marsupial fox like creatures were raised and breed by an unknown alien race, perhaps once inhabiting their homeworld with them. Unfortunately, their homeworld was destroyed when the Shofixti became over excited when defending their star system against an Imperial Star Destroyer and somehow triggered a chain reaction in the star which set off a super nova taking out not only the Star Destroyer but also their homeworld and most of their small fleet. Only thirteen of their scout ships escaped destruction. Those survivors have begun reproducing (each mating pair can produce an average of ten baby Shofixti per litter) and populating various colonies.
