Capsule: This is Kian's latest and favorite ship. He acquired it from a Sector Moff in gratitude for saving the Moff's life from an outbreak of Dilzarian Fever. No one ever suspected that it was Kian who caused the Moff's death 7 weeks later when the Moff contracted the rare and deadly Jelsam's Disease. It never once occurred to anyone that 7 weeks is the average incubation period of Jelsam's Disease or that anyone would be insane enough to use the horrible wasting disease as a weapon of assassination. Since the Guardian-Class cruiser was given to him by a Moff it is considered a legally owned ship in both Imperial and Corporate Sector Authority space.

While the New Republic does not recognize the legality of it's ownership, Kian has many powerful and secret supporters among the ranks of the New Republic's Special Intelligence agency known as Alpha Blue. These supporters have arranged for BoSS to "forget" to post his ship as illegal. Kian has made a number of rather drastic changes to the basic layout of his vessel including stripping out most of the internal walls and rebuilding the interior to his liking. This has resulted in 10 luxury-class full size staterooms in addition to his own personal suite. In addition, there is a 10-person medical bay that is completely outfitted with diagnostic beds, a surgical bay, 3 bacta tanks, 4 med droid assistants, 2 stasis field beds, and enough medical supplies to keep the entire medical bay working around the clock for a full month. The modifications done to the ship in the usual areas of speed and weaponry are equally extensive. He has upgraded both the hull and the shields to the point that the hull can resist light capital ship fire. The main hyperdrive engines have been left intact, but the backup drive has been replaced with the main drive from a Correllian PB-950 Patrol Boat. The weapons loadout has also been completely changed around, dropping the 4 laser cannons in favor of 4 large turbolasers that can individually fire only once every other round, but have been mounted in twin non-firelinked turret mountings. This allows one cannon to fire and then recharge while the other is firing.

These cannons are on sensor-shielded retractable mounts so that on visual inspection it looks as though this ship has had it's entire weapons complement removed and if a sensor scan is attempted specifically aimed at searching for hidden weapons a Very Difficult result is needed to reveal the hidden weapons. Also a scramjet system has been installed which greatly increases the vessel's speed inside an atmosphere, though the system is useless in space. The last of the modifications made to the ship is the installation of a sensor-shielded 4-person brig that requires the same concerted search for it as the turbolasers in order to reveal it.
