Background on Angie March

Angie, the only female Squad member currently, is a doctor and oncology specialist. Having lost a husband and a daughter to the enemy, Angie has been with the squad since it was formed.

Angie is a survivor. Although haunted by her own ghosts, she gives almost no indication of the personal tragedy that she has to bear. She lives for two things - her work and her daughter. She did have another twin daughter who drowned with her husband in a car accident. The real story is that Robert March and his daughter were turned for his scientific knowledge.

Quote: “My five year old daughter didn’t choose to go. They don’t just recruit, they kill.”

Roleplaying Angie March

Angie is almost too professional - it's how she protects herself. Because of the clandestine work of the squad, Angie plays her cards very close to her chest, both professionally and privately. She is exciting to play as everything is internalized and the challenge is to hint at the depth of her motivation and the emotion that she is holding back Additional Susannah Harker is a direct descendent of Joseph Harker, friend of Bram Stoker's and the inspiration for Jonathan Harker, the hero of "Dracula", a coincidence she says has a 'slightly spooky symmetry.
