DESCRIPTION:

(For stats on the Bullet One Light Fighter, see separate entry. While the Cosmowing has a Bullet One docked with it and can deploy it as desired, the stats given in this write-up are mostly for the Cosmowing without the Bullet One)

The Cosmowing is a heavier design of space fighter/bomber plane used by Captain Harlock and his crew on the Arcadia in their battles against threats throughout the universe. It carries more weapons than any of the standard model of Spacewolf space fighter planes. It also has a Bullet One light space fighter docked with it. The two look like a single fighter while together and will usually take enemies by surprise when they split into two separate craft.

In other sources, it is listed that the Cosmowing also carries a Bullet Two Light Fighter somewhere, though where it would fit is anyone's guess. It is thought that this was a fluke on the part of the toy companies for marketing, but who knows. It is the GM's/player's choices whether or not to allow this in their games.

Even without the Bullet Twos, the Cosmowings with their Bullet Ones make an impressive combatant in space or atmosphere, delivering lots of firepower against other starfighters and when bombing enemy targets on a planetary surface or other likely locations.
