Description: The SolarNova TT-86 was a landspeeder model produced by the Vanguerre Artists' Workshop of Vanguerre XI, and was one of only six prototypes the group produced before they dissolved on the eve of the Clone Wars. The vehicle was rectangular in shape, with an engine protruding on either side of the vehicle's rear end, with the speeder's pilot and passenger seat located between. The TT-86 had silver and black chromium-alloy plating with integrated chromomites[ which covered a disctreetly armored power plant at the front of the vehicle. In the year 34 ABY, Thandisten Pikalo owned an unmodified SolarNova TT-86 and used it in the city of Canto Bight on the planet Cantonica, where most other vehicles had been customized with modifications in some way.
