Description: Veris Hydan was a human male who served as an adviser to Emperor Palpatine with the title of minister. Although he was not sensitive to the Force, Hydan was a scholar of Jedi and Sith lore and history. Upon the discovery of a Jedi Temple on Lothal, the minister was charged with overseeing its excavation and unlocking its mysteries, specifically on discovering an entrance into the world between worlds.

During the excavation, Hydan encountered the disguised rebel infiltrators Sabine Wren and Ezra Bridger. Though Ezra managed to escape into a portal which led to the World between worlds, Hydan's forces managed to detain Sabine. He attempted to use Sabine's knowledge of art to decipher the mural of the Mortis gods, the gateway to the World between worlds. However, Sabine managed to escape due to the help of her rebel comrades. After Ezra and Sabine closed the portal, Hydan fell into a chasm when the Lothal Jedi Temple sunk into the ground.

Personality and traits

Veris Hydan was a human man with fair skin and blue eyes. He wore a dark headgear and robes. Hydan was a scholar of Jedi and Sith history and lore. Due to his expertise in those topics, he was made in charge of the excavation of the Lothal Jedi Temple. Unlike his Sith master, he was not Force-sensitive. Hydan considered himself an art critic and used these skills to investigate the painting of the Mortis gods, which he discerned was a portal to the World between worlds.

Hydan managed the excavation of the Lothal Jedi Temple with an iron grip and issued strict orders that no personnel were allowed to touch any of the artifacts, to avoid erasing evidence. Hydan was an astute man who quickly discerned that Sabine Wren was a rebel infiltrator. He was also a philosophical man who preferred to use words and flattery rather than force when questioning Sabine. However, Hydan was still prepared to use force against a defiant Sabine and ordered a death trooper to strike her with his rifle butt.

Hydan recognized that whoever controlled the world between worlds also controlled time and the fate of the universe. Hydan was a loyal servant of the Emperor and considered his own power to be a reflection of the Emperor's might. Hydan was distraught when the Spectres denied the Emperor access to the World between worlds and believed that the Emperor's fate was lost.
