Description: Trapper Wolf was a human male pilot for the New Republic. He flew an T-65B X-wing starfighter as part of an attack squadron with pilots Sash Ketter and Jib Dodger. In 9 ABY, the trio located the signal from a tracking beacon that had originally been activated during a mercenary attack on a New Republic prison ship.

Wolf and the other pilots detected the tracker's signal on board a space station managed by the criminal Ranzar Malk. After seeing a gunship preparing to launch from within the space station as they approached, the trio attacked the station in their starfighters.

Trapper Wolf was a human male who flew as a pilot for the New Republic's Starfighter Corps. In 9 ABY, Wolf was part of a New Republic attack squadron with fellow pilots Jib Dodger and Sash Ketter whose duties included locating certain active New Republic tracking beacons. One such beacon was activated aboard a New Republic prison ship during a raid by several mercenaries; however, before any attack squadron could reach the vessel, the beacon was transported off the starship on the gunship Razor Crest and moved to a space station controlled by the criminal Ranzar Malk.

Piloting T-65B X-wing starfighters, Wolf and his squadron exited hyperspace near the station. As they passed the Razor Crest, which had just left the station, Wolf confirmed that the beacon's signal was definitely coming from within the station. He then noted that there seemed to be another gunship preparing to launch from the station, which had been preparing to destroy the Razor Crest; however, the New Republic pilots took it as reason to attack. Opening fire with their laser cannons, the three pilots destroyed the gunship in the station's hangar and then proceeded to circle round and fire upon the exterior of the station itself.

Personality and traits

Trapper Wolf had fair skin, black hair and brown eyes.

Equipment

Wolf wore an orange and white flight suit and a white K-22995 helmet with blue markings.
