Special Abilities:

Distance VIsion: Abednedo eye's are spaced further apart than most species, and they have superior distance vision than normal species. This gives them a bonus +1D to all dice rolls involving sight at long distances, such as search. But they also lose -1D to all dice rolls involving their sight, requiring fine up close work.

Story Factors:

Natural in cramped spaces: Having evolved from a tunnelling forebear, Abednedo are naturals in cramped spaces and do not suffer from claustrophobia in any way. For example where another pilot might feel relieved and glad to be outside when he climbs out of a fighter cockpit after many hours, an Abednedo will feel no different.

Description: C'ai Threnalli was an Abednedo male who flew in the Resistance Starfighter Corps of the Resistance's military during their conflict with the First Order. Following the Battle of Starkiller Base in the year 34 ABY, Threnalli was amongst the personnel in the Resistance base on the planet D'Qar who waved off the YT-1300 light freighter known as the Millennium Falcon, piloted by Rey and her passengers, as it set off to find the missing Jedi Master Luke Skywalker on the planet Ahch-To.

Shortly after the Resistance evacuated the base on D'Qar, Threnalli flew as Commander Poe Dameron's wingman. He remained loyal to Dameron, joining the mutiny against Vice Admiral Amilyn Holdo along with at least two others. However, he was stunned, along with Dameron's other allies, by Holdo after she caused a distraction.

Threnalli was aboard the Resistance transports that escaped the Raddus and later participated in the Battle of Crait, managing to survive with only a small number of other pilots. He escaped aboard the Millennium Falcon along with the few Resistance survivors, and hugged Dameron.

In 35 ABY, Threnalli participated in the battle of Exegol against Darth Sidious' fleet.

Threnalli had brown skin, brown hair, black eyes, and wore an orange flight suit.
