

Weapons D6 / RanCorp MG-42 Repeater

RanCorp MG-42 Repeater Emplacement

The MG42 was meant as a more efficient replacement to the expensive and hard to produce MG34. The new weapon was light, very reliable, and provided devastating firepower. The MG42 was marginally lighter, fired faster, and most importantly, was much more cost effective and easy to produce than the MG34. The MG42 was used on all fronts, and was used in great numbers.

These were bought in large quantities by both the Empire and MetaCorp. The purchase of them by their rivals surprised RanCorp, but they were more than willing to sell them. They were sued by MetaCorp armed forces in the trenches of their conflict with the Palvar Defense Force in the Palvar Sector. These emplacements would be raised up slightly in the trenches with sandbags all around the barrel with enough room to strafe it. Many offensives were ripped apart by these weapons in the Palvar-MetaCorp debacle.
