Description: "Doom" was the nickname of a Clone Commander who served Jedi Generals Tiplar and her sister Tiplar in the Battle of Ringo Vinda during the Clone Wars. Aided by Anakin Skywalker and the 501st Legion, Doom and his unit engaged droid forces led by Separatist Admiral Trench aboard the space station orbiting Ringo Vinda. During the battle, 501st clone trooper Tup was seized by a premature activation of Clone Protocol 66 caused by a malfunction in his clone inhibitor chip, and murdered Doom's Jedi General Tiplar. Droid reinforcements capitalized on the disarray caused by Tup's betrayal, forcing Doom and his men to retreat under fire and investigate their general's murder.

Born on the planet Kamino and bred from the genes of the human male bounty hunter Jango Fett, the clone trooper commander that would eventually receive the nickname of "Doom" was specifically cloned to fight and die for the Galactic Republic as a part of a massive clone army. The army was first pressed into service when Republic Jedi engaged the droid forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems on the planet Geonosis, which sparked the start of the intergalactic Clone Wars. Doom was eventually placed under the command of the Jedi Generals Tiplar and her sister Tiplar, and the troopers placed under his command adopted a green color motif for their armor, along with a yellow triangle to represent their unit.

Battle of Ringo Vinda

During the war, Doom, Tiplar, and Tiplar participated in a large-scale campaign to capture a massive space station held by Admiral Trench above the planet Ringo Vinda, which was currently under the command of Trench and his droid forces. Doom's unit was joined by the 501st Legion, led by Jedi

General Anakin Skywalker, for the battle, which at some point reached a stalemate. During the intense fighting that took place aboard the station, much of Doom's forces were exhausted, but after several more encounters with Trench's droids, the Republic troops captured a communications center. Skywalker began to pen the next stage of the battle and ordered Tiplar and Doom to take the remainder of their company down one of two passageways that led to Trench's command post. Doom noted that his men were few, which prompted Skywalker to assign ARC trooper CT-5555,"Fives," and clone trooper CT-5385,"Tup," along with ten other 501st troopers, to accompany Doom and Tiplar. Tiplar would follow Skywalker and the rest of his troopers down another passageway.

The Republic resumed their assault and began closing in on Trench's command center. Tiplar and Doom fought side-by-side as they advanced, and faced minimal casualties during their trip down the passageway. Eventually, they reached Trench's command center and regrouped with Skywalker and Tiplar. However, as the fighting commenced, Tup, having entered a trance-like state, unexpectedly shot Tiplar in the back of the head. Doom witnessed the murder but was forced to continue fighting with the arrival of destroyer droids. Meanwhile, Tup was apprehended by Fives while Tiplar's body was retrieved by Tiplar. The entire attack lost its momentum in the wake of Tiplar's death and Skywalker ordered a retreat. The defeated Republic forces regrouped in the command center they had previously captured, and Doom and his men gathered around Tiplar's body to mourn her death. Tup had killed Tiplar due to a Sith-implanted control chip in his head, a device which was actually installed into every clone trooper's head. Tup's chip had malfunctioned, prematurely invoking Clone Protocol 66, which was a command that forced clone troopers to execute all Jedi for acts of treason.

Personality and traits

A skilled combatant, Doom was bred to be utterly loyal to the Galactic Republic and to obey orders unflinchingly. He knew the stakes that his job presented, and was wise enough to call for reinforcements when needed. He could also tell when the time to retreat was. Doom worked well with Master Tiplar, covering each other during the fighting. He, along with the other troopers of his company, mourned Tiplar's death, and expressed confusion at Tup's seemingly inexplicable murder.

Doom, like all clones, was a genetic clone of bounty hunter Jango Fett, and stood at 1.83 meters.

Equipment

Doom utilized Phase II clone trooper armor, along with a kama around his waist and a visor, flashlight, and an antennae and his helmet. By the time of the Ringo Vinda battle, Doom's armor was heavily battle-scarred. His armor was predominantly green, including the upper parts of his leggings, his chest plate, and the majority of his helmet. His lower legs and arms with white, however. His kama was green with yellow stripes, and both his helmet and chest plate bore the yellow triangle emblem that the rest of his company displayed on their armor. His left shoulder pad was also yellow in color.

When it came to battlefield armament, Doom preferred using his two identical blaster pistols to cut down enemy forces. He used his handguns to great effect during the Ringo Vinda
