Planets D6 / Bracca

Name: Bracca
Region: Mid Rim
System: Bracca system
Moons: 1
Class: Terrestrial
Atmosphere: Breathable
Climate: Temperate
Primary terrain: Junkyards, Plains
Points of interest: Platform thirty-three, Platform thirty-two, Platform twenty, Retired Control Tower, Shipbreaking Yard, Worker Rail Route 213
Fauna: Ibdis Maw, Scrap rat

Description: Bracca was an inhospitable junkyard planet located in the galaxy's Mid Rim. Located close to various hyperspace routes, Bracca's strategic importance made it the site of a campaign during the Clone Wars. During the reign of the Galactic Empire, the Scrapper Guild operated on the planet, breaking down starship wreckage and selling the components to the Empire.

Bracca was a poor Mid Rim world dominated by rocky plains. Large swathes of the planet's surface were comprised of junkyards, with countless decommissioned starships and other machinery spread haphazardly, awaiting destruction. It was orbited by one moon.

Given the generally inhospitable nature of the world, the majority of its population was comprised of scrappers, who made their living breaking down and selling the trash left on the world. Nearly all services on Bracca were operated by the Scrapper Guild. Credits earned in a workday were quickly recouped by the Guild due to the prices for food, lodging, and other necessities.

The scrappers often tipped platforms full of junk into the Ibdis Maw and harvested the waste products for profit.

Bracca's surface was crisscrossed by high-speed transport trains that delivered supplies from the scrapyards to the spaceports, where they would then head to the core worlds. The average shipment would pass through twenty-five checkpoints before reaching its final destination.

History
During the Clone Wars, Jaro Tapal and his Padawan Cal Kestis were stationed above Bracca in their Venator-class Star Destroyer Albedo Brave. However, following Order 66, Tapal was killed and Kestis crash-landed on Bracca.

By the time of the Empire, the planet was now under the control of the scrappers guild. For working-class people, this would be their only source of credits. It wasn't uncommon for workers to fall to their death whilst scrapping.

Five years later, Kestis was stuck on Bracca still awaiting word from the Jedi Order. After a workplace accident forced Kestis to use the Force to save his co-worker and friend Prauf, the Inquisitorius was alerted to his presence. Arriving on Bracca, the Second Sister and Ninth Sister questioned several of the Scrappers for the whereabouts of the Jedi. When Prauf stood up to them, he was killed by the Second Sister, forcing Cal to flee with the help of former Jedi Cere Junda and Latero pilot Greez Dritus.

Decades later, as war sparked up and the New Republic was destroyed, the First Order started using Bracca as the place to send claimed Republic starships for decommissioning. General Leia Organa ordered a team there led by Shriv Suurgav to recover starships. The team, codenamed Dross Squadron, infiltrated the Scrapper Guild, but were confronted by stormtroopers. With the help of locals, they stole several starfighters, but at the loss of one member.

Places of Interest

Platform thirty-three

Platform thirty-three was a platform of the scrapping facilities on the planet Bracca. A Resistance team led by Shriv Suurgav traveled to platform thirty-three via train while on a mission to steal starships from the planet.

Platform thirty-two

Platform thirty-two was a Scrapper Guild platform on Bracca. While on a train to platform thirty-three, a Resistance team led by Shriv Suurgav passed by platform thirty-two.

Platform twenty

Platform twenty was one of many Scrapper Guild platforms on the planet Bracca. While on a Resistance mission to Bracca with Shriv Suurgav's Dross Squadron, Raidah Doon was picked up as a known criminal by First Order stormtroopers. Another member of the team, Wesson Dove, claimed that Doon had joined them on the train at platform twenty.

Retired Control Tower

The Retired Control Tower was a facility located on the planet Bracca. The former Jedi Padawan Cal Kestis briefly dueled with the Inquisitor known as the Second Sister after the Galactic Empire discovered him, but was rescued by the crew of the Stinger Mantis.

Shipbreaking Yard

The Shipbreaking Yard was an area of rocky plains on the planet Bracca where the Scrapper Guild brought starship wreckage to be broken down. During the early Imperial Era, the Shipbreaking Yard was covered with wrecked Venator-class Star Destroyers from the Clone Wars, and was patrolled by Viper probe droids.

Worker Rail Route 213

Worker Rail Route 213 was a train line located on the planet Bracca, utilized by the Scrapper Guild. After the former Jedi Padawan Cal Kestis was discovered by the Galactic Empire's Inquisitorius, he was pursued along a train on Worker Rail Route 213.

Stats by FreddyB, Descriptive Text from WookieePedia.
Image copyright LucasArts.
Any complaints, writs for copyright abuse, etc should be addressed to the Webmaster FreddyB.