Story Factors:

Traditional: Klatooinian civilization was notable for its strong belief in tradition and the wisdom of elders. The center of their culture was the Fountain of Ancients, a slowly evolving natural glass sculpture on Klatooine's Derelkoos Desert. Long before the formation of the Galactic Republic, primitive Klatooinians discovered the Fountain, and revered it as a symbol of patience, tenacity, and the idea of strength coming from age. Their society was ruled by a Council of Elders, who granted young Klatooinians few rights. Klatooinians were taught the myths and traditions of their people from a young age, in a process which tended to suppress individuality. At the age of ten, they would be sold into servitude, with the most rebellious youths sent into the harshest conditions.

Description: Tarados Gon was a male Klatooinian Jedi who served the Jedi Order during the Separatist Crisis. Gon fought and died during the First Battle of Geonosis, the opening battle of the Clone Wars between the Galactic Republic and the Confederacy of Independent Systems.

Biography

Tarados Gon was part of the 212-strong Jedi strike team led by Jedi Master Mace Windu to rescue Obi-Wan Kenobi, Anakin Skywalker, and Padmé Amidala from the Petranaki arena on Geonosis. After Windu revealed the Jedi presence, Gon and the other Jedi emerged from hiding, and engaged the Separatist army in the First Battle of Geonosis. As the Jedi were overwhelmed, he stood between Saesee Tiin and Kit Fisto in the 'Circle of Survivors', blue lightsaber at the ready. At this time,Windu and Dooku debated the surrender of the Jedi, until Grand Master Yoda arrived with the clone troopers of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Having survived the initial arena battle, Gon was later killed when the Low Altitude Assault Transport/infantry gunship carrying him, Sora Bulq, and Eeth Koth was hit by artillery fire. Bulq and Koth survived the crash but Gon was not so fortunate, succumbing to his wounds.
