Creatures D6 / Tatooine Hallucinogenic Lizar

Name: Tatooine Hallucinogenic Lizard
Classification: Lizard
Skin color: Brown
Distinctions: Causes hallucinations in hosts
Homeworld: Tatooine
Habitat: Desert

Dexterity: 1D
Perception: 2D
Strength: 1D

Special Abilities

Desert Dwellers: These lizards are excellent survivors in arid and dry conditions, gaining a +2D to their survival and stamina in these conditions.

Hallucinogenic: These lizards can climb inside a host being, and cause hallucinogenic effects, this effect is used for vision quests by the Tusken people, but tends to cause predators to avoid eating the small creatures in nature.

Move: 5
Orneriness: 1D

Description: A species of lizard was native to the desert planet Tatooine. Capable of crawling inside a host being's body and creating hallucinations, the lizard was used by Tusken Raiders to guide individuals on spiritual journeys. Around 4 ABY, the chieftain of one tribe gave one such lizard to the former bounty hunter Boba Fett, who had earned the trust of the Tuskens.

Fett was assaulted by dreams of his past while wandering the Dune Sea, seeing visions of his youth on Kamino and his near-death within the sarlacc of the Great Pit of Carkoon. He eventually came across a Wortwood tree in the desert, from which he broke a branch to forge his own gaderffii stick. Upon returning to the tribe, the lizard exited Fett's nostril and returned to a small cage kept by the chieftain.

Stats by FreddyB, Descriptive Text from WookieePedia.
Image copyright LucasArts.
Any complaints, writs for copyright abuse, etc should be addressed to the Webmaster FreddyB.