Biography

An Alliance discovered

Lieutenant Romas Navander was a human male who served as an officer in the Alliance to Restore the Republic during the Galactic Civil War against the Galactic Empire. He was among the forces that were stationed in the rebel's Echo Base on the planet Hoth, where he worked as a controller in the base's command center.

In 3 ABY, Navander rushed with General Carlist Rieekan and a commander over to a control room terminal where Princess Leia Organa was listening to Captain Han Solo report his encounter with an Imperial Viper probe droid that he had destroyed near the base. Assuming that the Empire now knew their location, Rieekan ordered that the evacuation of Echo Base begin.

The Empire arrives

During the preparations, Navander remained at his console in the command center, where he was alerted to the arrival of the Imperial Death Squadron in Sector Four within the Hoth system. He urgently motioned over Rieekan and informed him of the arrival of the Empire. Rieekan then gave Navander an order to reroute all power to the base's shields in order to prevent an orbital bombardment of Echo Base. Navander then called out to the command center that the Star Destroyer Tyrant was approaching. After the Imperials blockaded Hoth and began landing ground forces, the rebels launched the first of their GR-75 medium transports, Quantum Storm.

Echo Base's v-150 ion cannon then fired at the Imperial blockade, disabling the the Tyrant and allowing the transport to escape unharmed. Navander announced the successful evacuation of the Quantum Storm over Echo Base's speaker system, prompting cheers from rebels waiting for evacuation. Ultimately, the Alliance successfully evacuated Echo Base, but sustained heavy casualties in doing so.
