Description: Slorda was a human male who attended a party at the Chandrilan Embassy on the planet Coruscant in 5 BBY. At the party he spoke with Senators Mon Mothma, Dhow, Teenar, and Vivyn about the Galactic Empire's new Public Order Resentencing Directive, but he was unconcerned with the increase in Imperial surveillance and arrests that the directive caused.

Biography

Slorda was a human male who attended a party in the Chandrilan Embassy on the planet Coruscant in 5 BBY. The party took place shortly after Galactic Emperor Sheev Palpatine introduced the Public Order Resentencing Directive in response to a rebel heist on the planet Aldhani.

Chandrilan Senator Mon Mothma hoped to gain votes against the directive at the party and spoke with Slorda and Senators Dhow, Teenar, and Vivyn. During the conversation, Slorda agreed that Palpatine was frustrating, overreactive, and too easily provoked, but he countered that the Emperor also spoke his mind and that citizens had nothing to fear from the directive's increase in surveillance and arrests as long as they had done nothing wrong. He agreed with Vivyn that they were living in dangerous times, but when pressed on the subject by Mothma, he changed the topic with a joke about being in danger of ingesting too much of the drink avaliable at the party.

Personality and traits
Slorda had light skin, gray eyes, and gray hair. He seemed unconcerned by the increases in Imperial oversight bought about by the Emperor's new directive.

Equipment
During the party, Slorda wore dark blue robes with a matching hat, a golden necklace, and a golden ring on the ring finger of his right hand.
