Characters D6 / Roga Danar (Human Mercena

Roga D'anar

Roga is a native of Alderaan. He grew up in a kind home that was part of a minor house of royals. The high and proper language of his youth has faded and is now intercut strangely with street talk. His parents were not cold, but often didn't have the time or energy to spend with him sharing experiences that many other families do. He was somewhat materially spoiled, and when there was nothing else to do he would go out around the city or into the forests and mountains in the nature preserves, looking for (often finding) adventure.

He was an athletic boy, bold and independent. His strength of emotion, sharp sarcasm, and lack of restraint led to slips or outbursts that occasionally got him in unexpected trouble, both with people who were his friends and who weren't. Roga knew lots of people, but he only had a few really good friends; the kind that he wouldn't have had any problem trusting his life to (he believes that's what all friendship should be like). He was never comfortable with girls in a romantic capacity; he had a handful of relationships of a year or less, and several "flings," but only once did he have any illusions that something would last.

His best friend was Gabrielle Mirabete, a sweet but sharp and independent girl of his age from a more influential family, who he knew by the time he could walk. Her parents always wanted her to be "ladylike" because they expected her to ascend into the family's power and assume their role and duties in society. They disapproved of Roga's playful, maverick personality and indifference to social circles. They tried to discourage her from seeing him and joining him on his searches for excitement, but to little effect. They would voyage together and come home very late, sneaking into one home or the other and sinking exhausted into bed, spending the remaining hours of night cradled platonically in each other's arms.

[Some of their interesting moments and details:

They were rock climbing. She got stuck and he fell while working his way over to help her, then climbed back up and helped her despite a broken leg and scratches all over from the rocks.

In their treks into the mountains, they often met one fearless eagle who sometimes perched nearby, seemingly watching them. They named her Sera, or princess, because she appeared as a ruler of the area. Eventually, she stopped showing up and they saw her instead in the zoo because she'd been shot sloppily by a hunter. After that, Roga would sometimes pityingly call Gabrielle "Sera" as a nickname, referring to her high regal status, controlling parents trying to keep her caged up, and how she always watched out for him (for Sera can also mean "fiery angel").

The only time Roga really thought he was in love back on Alderaan was with Katrina Matraca, a commoner but a lovely social butterfly. She, however, was just using him for sex, money, and social status. She could guess at Gabi's true feelings, but never said anything to him, instead flaunting their relationship to her with displays of affection and smug little comments. After 5 months of seeing and sleeping with Roga, she cast him aside, and he was totally devastated for weeks, hardly leaving his house. Gabi convinced another male friend to date Katie for a little while before taking her to the Grand Alderaanian Gathering, but then he dumped her in not a little scene on the dance floor, accusing her of cheating on him and taking advantage of him to improve her social standing. Katie's dreams of fitting into the high-class world of nobility were shattered with a single blow as she was disgraced in front of every noble house on the planet. She fled the royal pavilion in tears. Roga had been convinced with great difficulty to come as Gabi's date. She was the only girl he would possibly have gone with at such a bad time. He had to be held back by her from going to comfort Katie, who still held his heart even after she'd broken it. Only much later did he realize that he'd been saved from restoring Katrina's reputation and eventually being screwed over by her again.]

He was attending a sword tournament on Corellia when his planet (and as far as he knew, everyone important in his life) was destroyed by the first Death Star. Refusing to believe propaganda and suspecting that only the power of the Empire could be behind the crime, he cut the throat of a lone stormtrooper and hid the corpse in a trash bin. Leaving the planet, he began to wander from world to world, practicing his swordsmanship and offering his services as a mercenary or protector to causes that didn't seem too dishonorable. He takes every opportunity to stab the Empire in the back if he thinks he can get away with it.

What he didnt know was that his twin sister Tianna had left Alderaan right before its destruction to come cheer him on in the finals. And Gabrielle had fought her parents for permission to go, finally running away to join him. But by the time they arrived (separately) he was already gone on his rogue's journey through the galaxy. Tianna tracked him tirelessly until finally he stayed on Kashan long enough for her to catch up. It had been three endless years, and his relief at meeting her was almost beyond words. Later, Gabrielle heard of him from a great distance through the smuggling contacts she'd acquired - her best friend Roga was the most wanted man on a harsh out of the way planet called Kashan. So she went after him too.

Character Name: Roga D`anar
Gender/Species: Male human Type: Mercenary
Height: 5'8"
Weight: 150 pounds
Age: 28

Physical Description:
Roga is a man of 5 feet 8 inches tall, 150 pounds. His short black hair is neatly combed back out of his face. His green eyes are quick and piercing.

There's a slightly curved scar running down his left cheek. He sports a small black beard, growing just around his mouth, giving him a dashing, cute, and distinguished look all at once. His build looks powerful without being slow & lumbering.

He wears a black leather trenchcoat over a sleeved white shirt, grey pants, and lightweight dark grey boots, most of which shows a hint of the bulk of light combat armor beneath it. He wears a simple gold ring on his left hand. His coat is open and two swords can be seen swinging at his left side.

Alternate clothing... he wears a blue denim jacket, a light blue button-up shirt, khaki pants, and lightweight dark grey boots, most of which shows a hint of the bulk of light combat armor beneath it. He wears a simple gold ring on his left hand.

Personality:
He is thoughtful and intelligent, though not in the book-learner sense. Loves adventure and defending people from evil. Sarcastic; often can't resist making witty but provocative remarks, even when they don't help the situation. Resents the Empire. Very uncomfortable with heights. Intense dislike of strong cyborgs and military-type droids sparked by death and destruction they have caused in his life. Fiercely loyal to his friends, especially his love Gabrielle. Deep down, still misses his soulmate Mona.

Connection With Other Characters:
First married to Mona Lioncourt. Tianna D`anar's twin brother. Gabrielle Mirabete's best childhood friend, and now fiance. Adoptive father of Tessie and Sarah freckles>. Friends with Fihr Rhain, Destra Myeis, Daphne Avena, Rose Foxthrope, and Rakhim. Dislikes Sansuke Oni's aggressive, erratic ways.

Objectives:
Protect his friends. Become a fearsome and respected swordsman, and settle down with a family.
