Description: Mylaya were a type of huge cat-like creature with telescoping ears. They climbed and leapt through the forests of the planet Kashyyyk, where they were used as mounts by members of the Wookiee species. In 19 BBY, the residents of one Wookiee sanctuary used a trio of mylaya to transport Clone Force 99 and the Jedi Gungi back to the settlement. They then used the mounts in combat when fighting an Imperial convoy of Trandoshans and clone troopers.

Description
Mylaya were a type of huge cat-like beast with wide, telescoping ears. They were fur-covered quadrupeds with thin tails that had bushy fur along the end portion of their length. The creatures' fur could be red, green, or yellow in color, with darker stripes on their limbs and a lighter beard around their mouth, which had dark gray lips and two sharp teeth protruding from the lower jaw.

Mylaya's also had two black eyes and a large flat nose. Their paws had three long, clawed toes with a fourth, smaller toe near the rear of the palm. They were capable of carrying a Wookiee and two armored adult humans in a saddle on their backs as they leapt and climbed through the trees of the forest planet Kashyyyk, chittering and shrieking as they went.

History
In 19 BBY, the Wookiees of a sanctuary on Kashyyyk used mylayas as mounts to traverse the forest, and after a resident of the sanctuary was freed from captivity at the hands of the Galactic Empire by the clones of Clone Force 99 and the Wookiee Jedi Gungi, he returned on a mylaya with two other mounted Wookiees. The trio then carried the clones and Gungi back to the sanctuary, delivering them to the base of the treetop settlement before bounding up higher into the sanctuary.

Clone Force 99 chose to help the Wookiee villagers fight an Imperial convoy headed their way and set up an ambush, with several Wookiees mounted in pairs on mylaya in the branches above the convoy's path. Once the clones opened fire from the foliage below, the mylaya leapt down so their riders could also begin firing on the Imperial forces, which consisted of clone troopers and Trandoshans.

One Wookiee was shot from the back of a mylaya stood on top of a wrecked Armored Assault Tank, prompting its rider to charge further into the fray, but soon the Wookiees and their allies pulled back in order to lure the Imperials closer to a nearby netcaster nest. As they pulled the Imperials further in, one of the mylaya leapt down atop another active tank and swiped the Trandoshan on its turret away through the air before leaping away again. The Imperials were then defeated when the netcaster swarmed them as planned.
